How to Welcome True Crime Into Your Home

Sentences Delivered to Avid Literary Fans

TULSA, OK - October 28, 2018 - Today from 2-4 pm authors Jody Seay and Jim Lloyd read excerpts from their new real-crime novel, Almost a Murder, in Barnes & Noble at 8620 E. 71st Street, Tulsa, OK. They will be available to answer questions after the reading.

Seay says, "The book is not a whodunit. Right from the start we know whodunit." She continues "The mystery is why did these people get into such a terrible situation and how could it possibly turn out alright by the end of the book."

Lloyd agrees, "It's striking how many of the polarizations of fundamental values that were exposed during this 30-year old case could be pulled from the headlines today. Our worn-out grievances can be stubbornly intense."

The book details the epic legal battle Mr. Lloyd faced as he defended a young woman with no money, few friends, and who barely spoke English.

Seay says, "It's true that I'm impressed with Jim. But the real hero of the book, in my opinion, may surprise readers."

"Our friends, family, and members of the community who are avid readers and who like true crime, police procedurals, and courtroom dramas will join us to celebrate the launch of this new book at the 71st Street Barnes & Noble," says Lloyd. "It's pretty gritty, so you should be 15 years or older."
